Bio and Album Description

Breckin, meaning freckled, is the moniker of singer/songwriter, Heather Marsh. Originally trained in classical violin, and an award-winning visual artist and poet, Breckin has now tied her creative affections to her sweetheart, an Aspen green Gretsch Electromatic and to composition.

Citing heroes and muses from the sweet picking of Tim Buckley to the howls of Diamanda Galas from Laurie Anderson to Karen Dalton and Dead Can Dance – Breckin wears her diverse musical influences on her sleeve yet is never derivative.

At once bruised and brilliant, her debut album, Shiner, illuminates and holds an oblique mirror to the perennial subject of love and loss.

The title track, Shine, written while driving home along winding forest roads late at night, was penned for a dear friend who found herself unexpectedly alone with her new baby. The first in a series of songs that are equal parts elegy, sympathy card and therapy session, Shiner speaks truth to what can remain after profound hurt – brilliance, a tempered strength, wisdom and tenderness.
